RUSTON COMBS DISTRICT
One Detective Stunned by Plank Hurlled From Roof
in Entering Cellar.

Convinced as a result of autopsies that eleven deaths of persons in the Red Hook section of Brooklyn were caused by wood alcohol poisoning, District Attorney Ruston for the third time since last Tuesday evening headed a raiding party yesterday consisting of Capt. Daniel O'Connor of the Hamilton avenue station, four detectives and twenty policemen in a search for the main source of the supply.

Cellars, stores and woodsheds in the block on Conover street between Sullivan and Kings streets were searched. It was at 149 Conover street, at the corner of Sullivan street, where Mrs. Imelinda Vatala kept a grocery store, that two victims said they got the liquor that killed them. In the woodsheds at 145 the raiders found several whisky barrels, two demijohns and some whisky bottles, five wine presses and a number of bottles, some of which contained liquid resembling whisky.

The raiders then went to 115 Wolcott street, and on the top floor of this building, which is a three story basement, they found a twenty-five gallon still and all the paraphernalia belonging to a bootlegger's plant. Four gas burners were lighted under the still when the raiders entered. District Attorney Ruston commented that although the still was operating there was no one in the place to attend to it, and had it exploded the house and the buildings adjoining it would have been wrecked.

Still Made of Copper.
The still was made of hand hammered copper and capable of turning out 100 gallons a day. It cost between $7,500 and $10,000, according to Capt. O'Connor. The boiler of the still rested on a masonry foundation. On top of the boiler was a copper cylinder containing a copper coil. This was connected with a copper pipe which led to another copper receptacle alongside the boiler, into which the distilled fluid passed and then flowed through a series of coils which had a cooling effect on the fluid. At the bottom of the copper receptacle, which was called a collar, was a faucet, from which the finished product was dropped into containers on the floor. There was an opening in the ceiling and the door through which the odors from the distilling process escaped.

In the room was also found four barrels of grain mash and eight five gallon cans of alcohol. In the cellar of the building was found five 100 pound bags of sugar. In some of the barrels of mash sugar was poured and the mash was in process of fermentation. The alcohol was tested by Dr. Ernest Vaughan, medical expert to the District Attorney. He heated a copper wire red hot and put it in some of the alcohol poured out of one of the cans. He detected an odor which is found in wood alcohol.

Owner Surrenders.
District Attorney Ruston and the detectives of the Hamilton avenue station were unable to find who used the floor where the still was found. They learned that the building was owned by Michael Auletto, who lives on another floor in the building. Auletto could not be found. It was said that he drove away at 4 o'clock in the morning in a high powered car and has not been seen in the neighborhood since.

Assistant District Attorney Snyder got in touch with Auletto's brother, Frank, who lives next door at 117 Wolcott street, and with Alexander Augustino, the janitor of the building, who said that the still was found. Frank Auletto said his brother is a longshoreman. It is reported that he owns four houses. These buildings are at 115 and 117 Wolcott street, 285 Van Brunt street and another one in Luger street.

Early last night Michael Auletto, hearing that he was being sought by the police, went to the office of the District Attorney and surrendered. When questioned by Marshall Snyder, Assistant District Attorney, concerning the twenty-five gallon still and quantities of alcohol, which were found in the building, Auletto was not able to explain their presence there. He rented the three rooms in the top floor of the building on August 10, he said, to a man whom he has not seen since.

For the last two months Michael Auletto has been receiving visitors at the rate of fifty a day at 115 Wolcott street, the District Attorney was told. When the four gas jets were discovered Cal McCarthy turned them off and notified the gas company. Men from the company found that the gas had been turned off from the meter.

Other Raids.
Policemen were detailed to guard the place where the still was found while the raiding party continued a search of the neighborhood. They visited 72 Sullivan street where they found a one-still jar of alcohol in the apartment of Victor Peterfite. In the cellar was found a five-gallon still and a copper container. Peterfite said that the jar of alcohol was given to him by William Wobbe, who lives at 72 Sullivan street. Wobbe was questioned by the detectives and he said he used to make "a little" for himself months ago.

At Wobbe conducted a restaurant at 540 Van Brunt street, the detectives recalled that Antonio De Janero, who is now in the Kings County Hospital suffering from alcoholic poisoning lives there and said that he got a couple of drinks from a stranger in the hall before he was taken ill.

In another raid conducted by the raiders at 118 Sullivan street, while the detectives were looking for the still, McCarthy was struck on the head by a five-foot plank which was hurled from the roof. A search was made but the guilty one was not found. The blow stunned the detective.

Trio Flee in Department Automobile After Shooting at Officers.

Lieut. Maurice Higgins and Sergeant Dennis O'Keefe of the Plainfield, N. J., police department were overpowered early yesterday morning by three men who knocked them down, took their pistols, dragged them into the roadway and then escaped in a police automobile after firing several shots at them.

Two hours later Cornelius McCarthy, Chief of the South Plainfield police, captured two men crawling through the underbrush near Metuchen, after he had shot one in the leg with a load of buckshot. Chief William Hutchinson of the Metuchen police captured a third man in a swamp behind the town.

The three men were sent to police headquarters in Plainfield, where they gave their names as Joseph L. Allen of 34 Elm street, Newark; George Conway of 210 West 142d street, and George Brown of 242 West 111th street, both of New York. They were charged with atrocious assault and battery and with intent to kill. Police said they believed the men had stolen an automobile in which they were riding when they attracted the attention of Lieut. Higgins. The motor car was searched and found to contain a revolver, a box of cartridges, a razor, a blackjack and a torn automobile license card bearing the name of James J. Hart of 279 West 117th street and the business card of the Closs Garage of Astoria, L. I.

Lieut. Higgins was in the Plainfield West End on another case when he saw the car turning into West Front street from Rock avenue. Allen was driving and Higgins asked him to show his license, the policeman said. He could not do so, but one of the other men produced the card made out to Hart. Higgins told them they were under arrest and sent to the station for help. O'Keefe came in a police car. The three men were ordered to leave their machine and get into the other automobile. Higgins drove. He had gone but a short distance down Rock avenue when one of the men suddenly hit him on the head and then dragged him from the automobile. The three men then attacked O'Keefe, overpowered him and threw him from the machine after they had taken his weapon and that of Higgins.

Girl, 7, Dies and Mother May Not Recover From Gas.

George Amiller, an employee of the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company, smelled gas yesterday morning while working in the basement of the apartment house at 217 Mernald avenue, Coney Island. He heard it to the apartment occupied by Mrs. Martha Lavender, forced the door, and in the bedroom found Mrs. Lavender lying on the floor with her children. The girl, seven years old, and William, 3 months old, clapsed in her arms. The baby was dead and the little girl and her mother were unconscious.

The little girl died an hour later. Mrs. Lavender was in a serious condition last night and is not expected to recover. Detective Michael Abt of the Coney Island station found a note which the woman left for her husband, in which she said that she would try to have her spirit bring him good luck. The District Attorney's office said that if the woman recovers she will be arrested on a charge of homicide.

Patrolman Ernest O. Lawson of the Alexander avenue station, in the Bronx, was charged before Magistrate Douras in Morrisania court yesterday with having extorted fifty cents from John Gillen, a chauffeur, of 464 East 147th street.

Gillen said he was driving an automobile on Third avenue recently when Patrolman Lawson, seeing that the car's lights were not burning, threatened to serve a summons on him. He said he gave the policeman fifty cents and went on his way without a summons. Lawson was held in $500 bail for the Grand Jury. Last week he was held in bail on a charge of having received an automobile that had been stolen.

Soap box orators will henceforth have to display their boxes with the American flag when orating in the town of West New York, N. J. An ordinance requiring that the flag be displayed at all street meetings of a political or social character was adopted by the Board of Council last night and the police have been directed to arrest any person who violates it.

During the primary campaign West New York has been overrun by political splinterers and the remarks of some have been construed as being unpatriotic. The ordinance was suggested by Albert C. Schuch, connected with the Order of American Mechanics.

ARCHBISHOP DEPORTED.
Edouard Aguirre Velasquez, Consul General of Guatemala in this city, yesterday received cable advices from the Minister of Foreign Affairs in Guatemala stating that, owing to Catholic clergy having participated in the recent political disturbances, the Government had decreed the expulsion of Archbishop Munoz Capuron. Baker's Lawyers May Visit

SOME FACTS COINCIDE

Original Ross Known as Natty
Dresser—30 Suits Found in Room.

The Federal and Westchester county authorities have reason to believe that the mysterious Charley Ross, alias Charley Rogers, the connecting link mentioned frequently in the Ward murder case may be Charles Rogers, who was arrested in the narcotic raid in the Longacre Hotel Thursday night. Rogers is locked up in the Tombs in default of $10,000 bail and is expected to-day to be questioned by District Attorney Frederick E. Weeks of Westchester county regarding the killing of Clarence E. Peters on May 14 last by Walter S. Ward, vice-president of the Ward Baking Company.

On the night of the shooting by Ward, who is awaiting trial at liberty in $50,000 bail, Peters is supposed to have met a man by the name of Ross, alias Rogers, who accompanied him to a lonely spot near the Kensico Reservoir, where he was murdered. Ward claims he shot Peters in self defense and gave battle to two other men who escaped in another automobile. Since then the Westchester County authorities asserted by Pinkerton detectives and Ward's attorneys, have made every effort to locate Ross or Rogers, who it is believed could solve the tragedy.

Palmer F. Tubbs, assistant to Walter S. Ward, shortly after the murder told District Attorney Weeks that Rogers or Ross accompanied by Peters had come to the Ward Baking Company office a few days before the murder and the trio had had an animated conversation outside of the building. Mr. Tubbs gave a minute description of Rogers, which tallies with that of the man in the Tombs.

According to Ralph Oyster, Chief of the Narcotic Division of the Department of Justice, Rogers has a criminal record and also from time to time made book of the races. When arraigned, Rogers admitted that he was a bookmaker. The Ross or Rogers in the Ward case was also a bookmaker and from the start the mystery had a race track angle. It is known that Ward had frequently visited the race tracks hereabout and had received tips from touts.

Efforts last night at Police Headquarters to ascertain whether or not Rogers has a criminal record were without result. Chief Oyster said that his records found between 20 and 30 suits of clothes in Rogers's room in the Longacre Hotel. The mysterious Ross has been described as a natty dresser.

To put an end to all doubt regarding Rogers's identity it is not at all unlikely that Walter Ward and his assistant, Mr. Tubbs, may visit the Tombs to-day. They are thought to be persons, so far as is known, who could say whether or not the prisoner is in any way connected with the Peters killing.

Rogers, Edwin Travers, clerk at the hotel, and Jacob Rosenberg were held in $10,000 bail each. Thomas Sander, in bonds of $7,500 each; Irving Landauer in $5,000 and Ivan Lang and Frank Cooper in bonds of $1,000 each.

Randolph Landauer, manager of the Longacre Hotel, denied the report that the place was a central distributing point for drug peddlers.

Oyster said he heard it to the apartment occupied by Mrs. Martha Lavender, forced the door, and in the bedroom found Mrs. Lavender lying on the floor with her children. The girl, seven years old, and William, 3 months old, clapsed in her arms. The baby was dead and the little girl and her mother were unconscious.
